Metro Information and Map

The Washington D.C. Metro is one of the easiest and most reliable in the country. George Washington University, and the Elliott School by just a couple blocks, sits right next to the metro station Foggy Bottom/GWU. Fare machines take cash/debit/credit.

How to Purchase a SmarTrip (Metro) Card:

1. Find a blue SmarTrip card vending machine right before the fare gates, labeled in Orange "Farecards and Passes"
2. First, the machine will ask if you are buying a card or refilling (step 4)
3. Purchasing a card will cost $2, and the fare can be adjusted (filled).
4. Look at the Fare Chart above to see how the fares vary by distance traveled and peak/off-peak hours. If going round-trip account for both ways when purchasing your fare. Tap Card to confirm purchase.
5. Continue to fare gates labeled with the green arrows for entry, and touch card on the green SmarTrip button on the right side of each machine. As you walk through, check on the screen on the right side how much fare you have remaining.
6. Continue to your station platform.
7. When exiting, touch your SmarTrip card again on the fare gate, exactly as done in Step 5.

Adding Value: In the event that you don't have enough value on your card to enter/exit the metro, find another blue SmarTrip card vending machine and choose the option "Add Value" and follow the prompts. There are also typically Orange/Brown card machines when exiting the metro that can be used only if you need to refill your card. When you tap your card, the debt amount will be displayed and refill accordingly. Be mindful that these machines are old and sometimes malfunction. Don't hesitate to go up to the assistant stand located right next to the fare gates and ask if you can go through the fare gates without paying, refill your card, and return back through the fare gates with your refilled card. This is typically done if the machines do not work.

Metro System:

From Foggy Bottom Metro to Elliott School:

1. Exit the metro and cross 23rd Street NW at either crosswalk.
2. Turn right and walk down 23rd Street NW. Should see letters going from I to H to F St. NW as you walk, if you reach One Washington Circle, you are going the wrong direction.
3. Once you reach F St. (Hotel Hive is on the corner), turn left onto Virginia Ave. NW and continue down until you reach E St.
4. Turn left onto E St. and walk straight until you reach Elliott School on left.

A Guide to your Stay in D.C.

Smithsonian Museums and National Mall:

One of the most iconic places in D.C., the National Mall and accompanying museums are an absolute must see. Designed by Pierre L'Enfant in 1791. Best of all, Smithsonian museums are free to enter and a walk around the mall is both symbolic and breathtaking. Some important sights are:

Lincoln Memorial: Perhaps one of the most famous monuments, the Lincoln is best at dawn or dusk. With amazing views over the entire mall anytime of day. Etched in stone on either side of seated "Honest Abe" include his second inaugural address and famous Gettysburg address. Note, when engraving the speeches, there was originally an error. Can you spot the where on one of the speeches an E turned into an F?

Washington Monument: The tallest structure in the world from 1884 to 1889 (Eiffel Tower afterwards), the Washington Monument is the tallest structure in D.C. and you can see it from all over the city. Recently closed for a new elevator and quing space, the Monument gives amazing views of D.C. The monument began construction in the 1840s but was halted because of a lack of funds before and during the Civil War. When work resumed, a different Maryland quarry was used, and although originally the monument appeared the same white, the stones aged differently. About 1/3 of the way up you can see the stark difference in stone used.

White House: The official residence of the President, 1600 Pennsylvania is Washington's best know address. George Washington never lived in this house, with second president, John Adams as its first resident. During the War of 1812, British troops burned it down almost completely, but since then it has been renovated and restored numerous times. Before 1901 and Theodore Roosevelt coined the term "White House," it was called the 'Executive Mansion." Also, when president FDR became wheelchair bound in the 1940s, the White House became one of the first major ADA accessible buildings, about 50 years ahead of its time.

Smithsonian: Including, the National Air and Space Museum, Museum of Natural History, American History Museum, the Renwick and Smithsonian American Art Galleries (SAAM), and the National Portrait Gallery. With over 155 Million specimens/artifacts on record.

U.S. Capitol: The meeting place of U.S. Congress, the Capitol Building has been renovated several times. The building as it stands today was completed in 1871. Electricity was added in the mid-1890s, while before only skylights and gas lanterns could be used for lighting. The dome is also a must see, documenting 150 years of American progress.

Other Possibilities for the Weekend:

- See August Wilson's classic American drama, Fences, at the Ford's Theatre. Find tickets here.
- See one of the daily 7pm public performances at the Kennedy Center, or purchase tickets for:
 - Mariinsky Ballet: Paquita
 - The Musical: Footloose
 - D.C. Longest Running Comedy Show: Sheer Madness
- Walk through the neighborhood of Georgetown (M Street), and shop at some of the area stores and boutique shops. Also, if you have a sweet tooth, try pastries at "Georgetown Cupcake" and "Baked & Wired", two bakeries with a healthy D.C. rivalry. Have a cupcake at both and decide which is more to your liking.
- Get your library card at the Library of Congress. Take the metro to Capitol South and walk up 1st Street and it will be on your right. This is the largest library in the world, and the spaces and reading rooms here are vast. You can take a 1-hour walking tour to learn about some of the priceless manuscripts held here.
- The United States Holocaust Museum tells the history of the Jewish Holocaust over four separate floors. Entrance is free, and the museum's exhibitions cover a vast amount of ground on the subject of the Nazi-run genocide, with countless artifacts, archival documents, footage and testimony, including poignant comments on recent genocides in Rwanda, Bosnia and Darfur.
